

FSU Business Living-Learning Community

We're not BUSINESS as usual!

Maximize your potential by being a part of the Business Living-Learning Community at Florida State University!

The FSU Business Living-Learning Community (LLC) focuses on engaging business-intent freshman students from the moment they arrive on campus. Join a cohort of 75-150 business-intent students and live in a community setting within Azalea Hall, an FSU residence hall. Together, learn about career options in business, become familiar with the college's student-support programs and develop essential skills for success at FSU and beyond. Through a combination of small group seminars and larger gatherings featuring guest speakers, you'll be encouraged to explore your own interests and extend your learning beyond the classroom. Herbert Wertheim College of Business faculty, staff, students and alumni actively provide a supportive network as you navigate a business career path.

The Business LLC sets you up for success as a business student in any of its nine majors:

- Take a colloquium course (1 credit) in the fall and spring semesters that focuses on career preparation and academic planning.
- Take a business prerequisite course in the spring semester with your LLC cohort.

Engage with business faculty and staff to assist in academic planning

Network with alumni and other professionals to help shape career choices

Receive extensive mentoring from current upper-division students

Get early exposure to Herbert Wertheim College of Business events, organizations and resources

Thrive in a supportive community environment among students with similar goals
